

WINTER SESSION FINANCIAL AID

Winter session is considered part of the spring semester that follows it. The number of credits you take during the Winter session is combined with the number of credits you plan to take during the following spring semester – together, that determines your spring financial aid award.

If you decide to withdraw from a Winter session class, that class may not be counted in your financial aid for the spring semester, and your financial aid may be reduced.

The review of Satisfactory Academic Progress (SAP) (based on your grades from the preceding Fall semester) will take place after Winter session courses begin. If you're not meeting the standards, your financial aid for the spring semester (including Winter session) may be canceled after you've started classes and incurred charges.
